Consider two polynomials of degrees m and n. Suppose that we add or subtract the two polynomials. Two cases now arise: If m and n are unequal, the resulting polynomial will be of a degree equal to the larger of m and n. If m and n are equal, the resulting polynomial will have a degree which is at the most equal to m and n, but it could also have a degree which is less than m and n.

Negatives and subtraction are the same thing, it is just where it is. Negatives are in the beginning such as - 3 or 5 (-3x) or 6/-2. Minus/subtraction is between two things such as 4 - 7 or  $3x - 2$ . So if you have  $3 - (-2)$  the first is a minus between two numbers and the second is a negative.
